INTRODUCTION

360 feedback is the aggregate feedback of employee performance based on the inputs of multiple raters who have worked with the employee. This 360 feedback process is designed to guide you in your professional development.

WHEN USED EFFECTIVELY, THE PROCESS CAN:

Help you identify your strengths and developmental opportunities

Provide you with the opportunity to understand what others' perceptions are of your competencies and behaviors

Foster a culture of open and honest communication between you and your colleagues

Give you the opportunity to take ownership of your own development

UNDERSTANDING THIS REPORT

FEEDBACK PARTICIPANTS

Data will be reported for a participant group as long as there are 3 respondents. If there are fewer than 3 respondents in the Peer and/or Direct Report category, their feedback will be placed in the 'Other' category. If there are fewer than 3 total respondents for your assessment, your report will come back blank. This is not applicable to feedback from Managers.

● Peers	30%
● Managers	10%
● Direct Reports	30%
● Others	30%

TIPS

Did your report come back blank? If so, you have a few options. Please discuss with your HR department before proceeding.

- Launch another report from your 360 Feedback account, this time adding more feedback participants.
- Remember to send reminder emails - this will increase participation rates.
- Opt to proceed with just your Manager's feedback.

DEFINITIONS AND CALCULATIONS

Getting the most from your 360 feedback involves analyzing and understanding the data in your report. This section will help you analyze your feedback and determine the areas of strength you wish to build upon and the areas of opportunity you wish to address. The analysis you perform at this stage will assist you in creating your development plan.

DEFINITIONS:

Score - Represents the average rating for a particular respondent group in either an overall competency or behavior.

Gap - The difference between one rating group and another rating group.

Competency - Encompass the knowledge, skills, and attributes that define what behaviors an employee must exhibit to perform well in their job.

Behaviors - Detailed statements describing what a competency looks like when it is performed by a person on-the-job. In essence, they describe observable actions which form the basis of the competency. The descriptors vary by the degree of proficiency required to demonstrate the competency at a specific level.

RATING SCALE:

N/A Not Observed
1 Does not demonstrate behavior
2 Inconsistently demonstrates behavior
3 Consistently demonstrates expected behavior
4 Exceeds expectations for behavior

TIPS

360 feedback is for development purposes.

The goal of the 360 process is to further your own success and development, so openly accepting feedback increases your likelihood of creating an effective development plan.

Keep an open mind.

As you look at the data and read the comments your raters provided, expect some surprises. You do not have to agree with all the feedback given, however, there is value in understanding how others perceive you.

Focus on both your strengths and weaknesses.

All feedback – positive and critical – is useful to improving overall performance. Use the verbatim comments to gain context for the numerical ratings.

The 360 feedback assessment is only as effective as you allow it to be.

Success hinges on what you do with your feedback. Once you have read through the report and overall results once, go back through the report in more detail and look for patterns and themes which can be incorporated into a development plan.

REMEMBER

You should debrief your results following the instructions from your HR department (e.g. review with your manager or coach, etc.). In these meetings, identify a short list of actionable items for your development plan and highlight themes from the report to share with your manager, so they can assist you in your development. More information on how to analyze your results and create a development plan can be found at the end of this report.

TOP PERCEPTION GAPS

Top perception gaps show the behaviors that others scored differently than you scored yourself. The difference in scores may indicate that others perceive you demonstrate this behavior more or less than you do. As you build out your professional development plan, explore opportunities where you can address the discrepancies or leverage your strengths to improve your overall performance.

NEXT STEPS

Use McLean & Company's 360 Feedback Interpretation and Development Plan Job Aid (only available in English) to work through your results.

To make the most of your 360 feedback:

- Focus on both strengths and opportunities.
- Look at how different rater groups rate the same competency.
- Discuss why there might be differences. For example, if direct reports rate you lower on "Teamwork" than your boss or peers do, it might indicate a trouble spot. However if peers rate an employee lower on "Leadership" than does their staff, it may just indicate they have not had the same opportunities to observe the employee in a team leadership role.
- Use the verbatim comments to gain context for the numerical ratings.
- Make the connection between the data and the impact it would have on the employee or the business to strengthen a particular competency.

McLean & Company recommends that all employees participating in a 360 Feedback assessment be required to create a development plan with the input of their manager and/or an external coach. These plans should be based on the 360 feedback, but also take other data points (performance review, project feedback) into account and link directly to the vision and goals of the organization. Once you have analyzed the feedback, you should work with your manager or a coach to create a concrete development plan. These plans should be based on the 360 feedback, but also take other data points (performance review, project feedback) into account and link directly to the vision and goals of the organization. Use McLean & Company's 360 Feedback Interpretation and Development Plan Worksheet (only available in English) to understand the data in your report and capture your development progress.
